The results of the GLASS customer satisfaction survey are in! We appreciate all of the patrons who responded, as well as those who filled out the survey for patrons.

Our results had great representation of patrons over 50, who made up about 81 percent of responses.

A staggering 95 percent of survey respondents say they’ve called GLASS with questions, book requests or for other services. We were pleased to hear that 81 percent of those who called us found telephone service “very helpful,” with another 16 percent saying we were “helpful.” One person added, “These people are a blessing.”

We were very happy to find 100 percent of respondents who have visited our walk-in locations in Atlanta and in Bainbridge found the service helpful. Please, come visit again! We love seeing you.

The survey showed what our reader advisors know: Our readers devour their talking books and magazines. About 38 percent of patrons read two to six hours a day. An impressive 18 percent of patrons read at least six hours a day!

A bit over half of those who responded do not use a mobile device to use our service. Awareness of the BARD Mobile app is fairly high, with 79 percent of patrons saying they’ve heard of it.

Several patrons expressed growing pains as we updated our catalog. We have hired a technical support librarian to work on keeping our catalog as easy to use as possible. He is also cleaning up book information to make it easier for you to find the type of books that you like.

Many thanks to those who tell their friends and loved ones about GLASS!

Almost a fourth of respondents shared that friends and relatives were the ones who told them about GLASS. Other common referral sources were government agencies, social workers or rehabilitation staff, public library staff and optometrists. Not all of our patrons could recall how they first heard of the service, with one stating they had “been using it for what seems like forever.”

While a common refrain was that our patrons had their local library as an excellent source of audiobooks, 73 percent of our patrons would have no audiobook or accessible library material access without GLASS. Several people knew of Audible but said that the amount they read would make it a “financial burden” if that was the only source of books. One reader can’t afford to buy accessible books since retirement, but they happily continue using talking books, as they have for 51 years.

Altogether, 92 percent of our patrons say they are satisfied or completely satisfied with their service. Many included kind comments such as “this is a wonderful service and I am so grateful for it.” Another person said, “I love and appreciate all of your programs. I could not make it without them.”

Thank you all for your feedback. We are proud to serve our GLASS patrons.

Talking Book Topics Have Order Forms

There’s been a change to the delivery of talking book topics on cartridge.

The cartridges are now mailed with a large print form you can use to order books! The form has your information and our return address on it already. All you need to do is select your books on the form, tape the form closed and put it in the mail.

Returning the cartridges has gotten a bit easier as well. The talking book cartridges no longer have a mailing card that you have to flip before putting the container in the mail. Instead there is a label with the return address on the cartridge container. All you have to do when you finish your talking book topics cartridge is put it in the box and put it in the mail. It’s as easy as that.

If your cartridge and form arrive in a cardboard box, there is no need to return the box. Feel free to throw it away.

2016 Pulitzer Prize Winning Books

Note: Talking books begin with DB. These titles have not been released in print braille yet.
